The Value.

Every day, business leaders (CXO, Boards etc.) are making financial decisions based on the security posture of their organization. Much of this information presented is composed for consumption of a technical audience and can be hard to understand and interpret relevance and relativity for executive staff.

ArmorPoint's Security Reputation Services provides easy to understand security performance grading, geared for consumption by the C-Level and board members. Understanding an organizations security posture as seen by the outside world, the same information bad actors use to determine targets for malicious data attacks, allows executives to make more informed and concise business decisions.
